College drinking is an activity in-which many students partake, but they may not consider the consequences of their actions in the moment. College drinking can have a negative impact on a student's life and overall well-being. Students may face legal trouble, they may face academic struggles, or they may face personal struggles due to drinking. For example, if you are drinking underage and you get caught, you will face fines and black-marks on your record. Staying up late and drinking will make it hard to get up in the morning for class, and if you're rushing out of the door you might forget course materials or homework for class. With that being said, you may even be neglecting your homework or studies, and this will only lead to a negative academic outcome. Moreover, you may even skip class because you're so tired or not feeling well! With that being said, continued late nights of pouring poison into your body can also result in health problems. Seemingly, college drinking can cause a negative domino-effect in your life! Finally, drinking may also put strains on your personal relationships, as well. If you are focusing your time on partying, the people who care about you and want to see you succeed may disagree with your actions; this may cause disruptions with your relationship. Again, college drinking might seem like a fun time in the moment, but it is important to look at the bigger picture and remember your goals when faced with the temptation of partying in college.
